Over $3 Billion in Drawback Duties Go Uncollected Each Year in Canada and the USA

If you export a product that has been previously imported, you may be entitled to receive a refund of the duty paid when the product was originally imported.

This refund is called a Duty Drawback.

However, a substantial portion of these potential drawbacks go unclaimed due to lack of knowledge or lack of proper assistance.

We evaluate all of your potential duty recovery opportunities, advising you of what you might expect to gain back based on a comprehensive review of your transactions and supporting records.

We can assist you to set-up a complete drawback program in accordance with all applicable regulations and help your company establish internal procedures to expedite the flow of paperwork to ensure regular filing of claims in order to receive drawback payments on a timely basis, thereby improving your cash flow and contributing to your bottom-line.

Using imported merchandise to produce or manufacture products for export? Paying import duties on finished goods which will be exported? Importing dutiable products which are subsequently exported? Purchasing imported products domestically which are later exported? Selling imported products to Canadian clients that export?

If the answer is "YES", to one or more of these questions you may be eligible for Duty Drawback or Duty Deferral. Duty drawback is an opportunity to increase profitability and reduce costs. You may be entitled to duty recoveries!

United States Customs and Border Protection estimates that 3 billion dollars per year of US import duties are eligible for drawback, of which 80% are not recovered.

Although there are no published statistics available from Canada Border Services Agency, it is our belief that the unrecovered amounts are also significant.

Up to 99% of all US Customs duties can be refunded on imported merchandise subsequently exported, or in some cases used to manufacture a new article for export. Duties paid up to 6 years ago may be refunded against exports over the past 3 years. Up to 100% of all Canadian Customs duties can be refunded on imported merchandise subsequently exported, or in some cases used to manufacture a new article for export. A claim for drawback must be filed within 4 years of the date the goods were released from Customs.

The growth of off-shore and near-shore sourcing has made it increasingly important for Canadian and United States firms to adopt strategies that factor into account opportunities to reduce or eliminate cost inputs through programs like Duty Drawback.
